Equities likely to rise further but valuations cast a concern

IANS ■ MUMBAI

US Fed will keep providing enough stimulus to revive the US economy," said Deepak Jasani, Head of Retail Research, HDFC Securities.

"This could support FPI inflows into the emerging markets, including India. Nifty could take support from 17,153 while 17,480 could act as a resistance in the near term," he added.

Lately, strong liquidity has boosted the domestic market with FPIs pumping in ₹6,800 crore in the last few sessions.

"Going ahead, the market is likely to continue with its positive momentum as economic recovery and vaccination continue their northward journey. However, valuations are also moving beyond the comfort zones and hence could lead to bouts of profit booking and increase in volatility," said Siddhartha Khemka, Head, Retail Research, Broking and Distribution, Motilal Oswal Financial Services.

"Large caps offer better margin of safety in the current environment and could continue to remain in focus in the near term as well," he added.

Recent data points such as GDP, PMI and GST collections have indicated a healthy economic recovery.

However, market observers cited high valuations along with chances of profit bookings as key factors that can cap gains and flare up volatility.

Last week, India's benchmark indices registered strong gains aided by positive global cues, encouraging macro data and FPI inflows.

Consequently, both the NSE Nifty 50 and S&P BSE Sensex closed the week at record high levels. The Sensex rose 3.6 per cent and the Nifty gained 3.7 per cent over last week, its second consecutive weekly gain and the largest in seven months.
